Cancer Survivors Against Radon (CanSAR)—made up of individuals who didn't know they were living with high levels of radon until the diagnosis of lung cancer invaded their lives—takes this opportunity to educate the public of the danger of high levels of radioactive radon gas in homes, schools, and workplaces. Radon gas, a Class A carcinogen, may seep from the ground into occupied buildings through cracks, openings, and porous concrete. Elevated levels of radon have been found in every state, but it is easily tested and not difficult to mitigate.

Approximately 21,000 individuals die each year from radon-induced lung cancer. What a tragedy, but you can help make a difference with support for radon awareness, acceptance, and action.

Information on radon testing and mitigation will be distributed and a limited amount of free radon test kits will be available.
